An additional 432,000 records were salvaged. (No fire damage occurred to records of Air Force veterans whose surnames begin with the letters "A" to "Hu".) The destroyed records contained induction and enlistment records, assignment and promotion orders, outpatient/health and dental records, and separation records. Such a determination may be made upon project closeout by the scientist, engineer, or manager overseeing the project. For a project determined to have exceptional historical significance, Air Force should propose to the National Archives and Records Administration (NARA) that the relevant case file in toto be retired to the National Archives as permanent. If NARA concurs that the case file should be permanent, Air Force should mark it as historically significant file. The file then should be transferred to the National Archives as permanent using the transfer instructions in Note 678.

COLUMN D DISPOSITION:

NOTES

- 213 Electronic systems that replace temporary hard copy records:
Destroy on expiration of the retention period previously approved for the corresponding hard copy records.
- 214 Electronic systems that supplement temporary hard copy records where the hard copy records are retained to meet recordkeeping requirements: Destroy when the agency determines that the electronic records are superseded, obsolete, or no longer needed for administrative, legal, audit, or other operational purposes.
- 675 Air Force may determine that an R&D project has exceptional historical significance because it produced a particularly broad and enduring benefit to Air Force or society, because it generated widespread national or international attention, or because of some other reason. Such a determination may be made upon project closeout by the scientist, engineer, or manager overseeing the project. For a project determined to have exceptional historical significance, Air Force should propose to the National Archives and Records Administration (NARA) that the relevant case file in toto be retired to the National Archives as permanent. If NARA concurs that the case file should be permanent, Air Force should mark it as historically significant file. The file then should be transferred to the National Archives as permanent using the transfer instructions in Note 678.
- 676 For case files covered by Rule 1.02, a copy of all final and interim reports must be kept for permanent retention under Rule 5.01.
